CORSET OF TODAY

No Indication of the Waistline Becoming Smaller.

Prevalent Style in France Is Extreme ly Low, Not Very Long and Lightly Boned.

The evolution of the corset is extremely interesting, observes a writer in the New York Tribune. Its American history dates back to the days of the Pilgrims, when the first article of this character was made in this coun-

SOME NEW PARIS HANDKIES Figures Embroidered in the Corners

Represent the Favorite Sports

of the User.

Paris fashion is busying herself with handkerchiefs. The latest designs have in the corners embroidered figures representing the user's favorite sport, such as golf, tennis, racing and fencing. The men are offered oblong handkerchiefs with colored borders. The milliners, who have generally adopted flower trimmings, are reproducing seasonable flowers of changing varieties as spring advances. They are now using byacinths, cowslips and buttercups, rarely seen on Paris hats. Black and red, blue and gray and yellow and white are the prevailing color schemes for gowns, with hat. shoes, stockings, handbags and even headdress to match.

The Sleeve Question,

In the advance models, wide sleeves seem to be more favored than the long, tight variety. Decorated sleeves, necording to some houses, will be as well liked as ever, and they wife com tinue to be of a contrasting fabric.

Children Crippled With Bovine T. B.

Lansing, June 15.—Is it possible to contract tuberculosis from cow's milk? Science has declared emphatically that it is possible— and common. But too frequently for the health of their children people have refused to believe the verdict. Only a few weeks ago The Michigan Business Farmer published an editorial on "Bovine Tuberculosis" which appeared to question this enlightened verdict.

Eggs and beeves are not the only things that are kept in cold storage. The fresh fern leaves that adorn the function tables of botels on occasion are probably from some ice chest and are taken out as demanded. To bone the corset they used whalebone, which they sewed in by hand—and this garment was not lightly boned as it is in these days. The whalebones were placed so close to one another that one row of stitching supported a hone at either side of it.

Unlike the corset of today, this primitive one covered the body from the waistline upward, leaving the hips practically unprotected. Reaching from one's chest to waist, it gradually diminished in size toward the latter point, where it again widened niightly, ending not more than two inches below the waistline. The top and bot—
